Recommended Cases to Accompany Analysis for Financial Management, 10e

This note offers chapter-by-chapter recommendations of cases that work well with Analysis for Financial Management, tips on finding other quality cases, and advice on preparing course packets.

As you review these recommendations, keep in mind that cases can be quite personal, so that what works well for one instructor may not work for others. Be prepared, then, for some trial-and-error as you search for cases that meet your needs. Remember too that the cases I am closer to mention are from a source much closer to me than I have used previously in the past, or seemed to me to be the case before. I am sure there are many other highly effective cases of which I am unaware. Indeed, if you spot any glaring omissions in my recommended list, please let me know.

Sources of Cases

Cases are available in two forms: published casebooks and individual cases. The two most popular corporate finance casebooks are:

- Brigham, Robert F., Kenneth Eades, and Michael Scholt, Case Studies in Finance, 6th ed, New York: McGraw-Hill, 2010.
- Erwin, Carl W., Richard S. Ruback, and Peter Tobias, Case Problems in Finance, 12th ed, West Ridge, IL: Irwin, 2005.

Casebooks are substantially convenient for ordering individual cases from multiple sources, offers significant advantages. Use of individual cases greatly increases the range of options, enables the instructor to tailor his course more precisely to student needs, and offers multiple perspectives on the subject matter. And, because all of the cases in the two books just mentioned are also available individually, there are few disadvantages to using individual cases.

Relative to individual cases used to prepare students with relevant, 21st-century bookcases, or creating copyright permissions and arranging reproduction and sale of the cases to students. Today's principal "winners" offering cases have greatly simplified the process and reduced the logistical burden borne by instructors.

The Principal Case Collections

Here are the web addresses of the principal case collections. Access to these sites is restricted to registered users, but registration is a simple process for faculty instructors. All of the sites offer casebooks, and full-text copies of many cases are available in pdf files. Teaching cases are also often available on request.

- <https://mgaharvard.edu>: Harvard Business School is the major provider of business cases. This site offers abstracts of Harvard cases and full-text copies of many. The site also contains cases prepared by faculty at other schools including Babson, Northwestern, and Yenching.
- <https://cases.darden.virginia.edu/>: The Darden Graduate School of Business at the University of Virginia is second only to Harvard as a source of business cases. Importantly, the site provides
