Some Aspects of Chinese Influences on Mughal Painting

Mughal painting is a particular style of South Asian, particularly North Indian, painting confined to miniatures either as book illustrations or as single works to be kept in albums. It emerged from Persian miniature painting and developed in the court of the Mughal Empire of the 16th to 18th centuries. The Mughal emperors were Muslims and they are credited with consolidating Islam in South Asia, and spreading Muslim art and culture as well as the faith. Mughal painting ...

Mughal painting during Jahangir: It is generally stated that during Jahangir's time, the art of painting reached its climax and with him departed its soul. Jahangir was not only interested in painting, he was also its keen judge. He established a gallery of painting in his own garden. He wrote in his biography, Tuzuk-i-Jahangiri: "As regards myself, my liking for painting and my practice ...

What has also been neglected is a study of how the Mughal artists synthesized aspects of these prints and maps to create a new painting style. Perhaps the best example of the synthesis of Mughal and European art in any one manuscript may be seen in an illustrated Khamsa, or collection of epic poems by the Persian poet , now in the British Library, dating between 1593-1595. While some scholars ...

Indian painting has a very long tradition and history in Indian art, though because of the climatic conditions very few early examples survive. The earliest Indian paintings were the rock paintings of pre-historic times, such as the petroglyphs found in places like Bhimbetka rock shelters. Some of the Stone Age rock paintings found among the Bhimbetka rock shelters are approximately 10,000 ...

Mughal Painting during Shah Jahan's reign and after. That Shah Jahan took more interest in architecture than painting is true, yet he did provide patronage to painting. However, the reduced number of painters at his court establishes the view that the art of painting certainly declined during his reign. As far as the reign of Aurangzeb is concerned, he withdrew the royal patronage that was ...
