For each sport, "Forbes" looked at four components of fitness: cardiorespiratory endurance, muscular strength, muscular endurance and flexibility -- as well as injury risk and calorie burn. Squash, an indoor racket sport that demands agility, speed and endurance, came out on top. Forbes' experts also gave high marks to rowing, swimming, cross-country skiing, basketball, cycling, running and boxing. While arguably not sports per se, rock climbing and the modern pentathlon also made the ...

This sport requires a lot more time than many other sports (though I do respect that pretty much every sport requires time). Most figure skaters are young and attend school. However, many also choose to home school to get enough time in on this sport. The earliest I have ever had to wake up in the morning for figure skating was 3:30 am. Granted, I live further from the rink than most of the ...
