This year, I have spent quite a bit of time building students' character and doing specific activities that require them to reflect on their behavior. Unfortunately, there is no magic trick that works to fix all the little issues in my classroom. I wish there was! It's been a constant focus and time of reflection all year long. I try a few things, it works for a while, then I need to ...

Building Catholic character requires authentic personal experiences of the faith, within and beyond the family. One Catholic father found that taking his self-centered 15-year-old son to see the city's soup kitchen for the hungry and homeless, where they subsequently volunteered together, got the son thinking less about the latest stuff he wanted and more about the needs of others.

10 great films set in Berlin; Few modern films have made the transition to classic status as quickly as Wim Wenders' Wings of Desire (1987). His tale of a guardian angel in a still-Wall-divided Berlin who falls in love with - and to earth for - a melancholy trapeze artist is a canny merging of cerebral formal experimentalism and unabashed popular romanticism.
