

The Devil's Bible - Codex Gigas

The Secrets of the World's Largest Book

At the beginning of the 13th century, a remarkable literary work was created in Bohemia. In past ages, it was rightfully dubbed the Devil's Bible, Codex Gigas, Liber Pergrandis or Gigas Librorum. The first mention of the Devil's Bible comes from the year 1295, but it is supposed that the manuscript is about 65 years older. The book was owned by a small Benedictine monastery of Podlažice near Chrudim, most likely around 1229. However, no records about its origin, author or reason for writing it have been preserved.

The Largest Manuscript Book of the World

The book is unusually large; it is thus no wonder that it was compared to the Seven Wonders of the World in the Middle Ages. It is about 900 mm tall, 505 mm wide and weighs an awesome 75 kilograms. It contains 312 parchment folios, hence 624 pages. It is reckoned that the skin of about 160 animals was necessary to acquire the writing material. What is fascinating is the unity of the book, concord of the writing and initial letters, harmony of the overall composition and individual details; all the texts are still legible even today. All the indications are that it was a life work of one person. Historians estimate that the scribe in question must have conceivably spent as many as twenty years on such a monumental work.
